Assistant Attorney General
J. Walter Yeagley

Frank Sturgis, mentioned above, is identical with Frank Anthony Sturgis, also known as Frank Fiorini, who is mentioned in the enclosed report as having entered into negotiations with Captain Diego to obtain transportation of his men from Miami to Cuba where Fiorini's men would stake out an area of operations for themselves. Sturgis is the subject of my letter to you dated December 16, 1960, at which time you were requested to advise whether the activities of Sturgis developed to date indicated a possible violation of neutrality statutes within the investigative jurisdiction of the FBI warranting additional investigation.

On January 19, 1961, an informant, who has furnished reliable information in the past, reported he had visited the camp maintained by Sturgis near Pompano Beach, Florida, and had learned that Captain Diego has a group leaving "this weekend" for Cuba and was to take along several of Sturgis' men as a separate unit under the leadership of one Max Vila, Jr. This same informant reported that he had learned that Bosch, Diego and Sturgis were on January 19, 1961, reportedly in Tampa, Florida, allegedly to obtain possession of a boat which had been undergoing repairs. Additional details of this trip and the identity of the boat involved are not known. (X)(u)

The United States Customs Service and the United States Border Patrol have been furnished all pertinent developments in this matter in view of the possibility of additional gunrunning activities on the part of the persons involved with the captioned organization.

A representative of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) in Miami has advised our Miami Office that although CIA has no operational interest in Dr. Orlando Bosch Avila and his organization at the present time, some consideration is being afforded this matter by CIA and it is possible that CIA may acquire an operational interest in this organization at sometime in the near future.
